Kenbrah's Twin Hot Pink Sunsets ~ W.Azure © 2007

For What He Is ~ W.Azure © 2007

I love him for what he is-- Not for what he is not. ~Frida Kahlo

Moondrops ~ W.Azure © 2007

After a splendid soak in an outdoor hot tub, we stepped onto the cool grass with our bare feet. Embracing, we glanced up to notice the full moon and the fog rolling in around the mountains. We then noticed a soft brush of cool fog droplets on our hot skin--the sensation felt like peppermint raindrops from the moon. It's great to live in CA!

Bubble Bath Respite ~ W.Azure © 2006

...Make love. Take a bath. Make love again. This delightful quote is by Frida Kahlo, an artist who dealt with decades of physical pain. The words burst the soap bubbles—like the relief and joy you can feel during a luxurious bath. What a fabulous idea to be able to take a break from one pleasurable activity by doing another pleasurable activity. This art piece was in the Ode to Love: Venus & Cupid exhibit at Aurora Colors Gallery in Petaluma, CA.

Petaluma Morning Mist ~ W.Azure © 2005

The view of Sonoma Mountain and that pair of redwoods from my home's picture window are exquisite.

Our first bliss
Petaluma morning mist
Oh, but that first kiss
And, well—you get the gist

Misty Mountain Hop ~ W.Azure © 2005

The mountains surrounding Petaluma, azure blue sky, and occasional glorious fog continue to catch my breath while I gratefully acknowledge how happy I am to be alive.

Stalwart Soulmates ~ W.Azure © 2006

That fabulous pair of redwoods from my home's picture window inspired yet another of my paintings.

Sun-washed Buttercups ~ W.Azure © 2005

Imagine waking from a restful nap in the warm sun. You've just opened your eyes and for a brief moment your world becomes awashed in yellows and greens.

Within the depth of winter, I finally found within me an invincible summer.”
~ Albert Camus, existentialist

Invincible Summer ~ W.Azure © 2005

A sun, fields of flowers, and a surfboard with Camus' quote.

Tangerine, lime, and fuchsia colors proclaim the exuberance of summer against the contrasting dramatic black of night. After months of searching for something to hang on this burgundy accent wall, I created this painting.

This art piece was in the Spirit of Color exhibit at the Bank of Marin in Petaluma, CA.
